Poetical.

Do You Owe the Printer?

BY ARTHUR HAINES.

Come sinful debtor, in whose breast
Some conscience may yet live,
Come with your coward fear oppressed,
And make this wise resolve:I'll seek the printer, though my debts
Have like a mountain rose,
I know his name, I'll pay him off,
Whatever may oppose.Perhaps he may take my excuse—
Perhaps believe I lie—
But if I perish I will pay,
And then his thoughts defy.Straightway I'll to his sanctum go,
And see him face to face;
I'll boldly "fork the tin" that's due,
And thank him for his grace.Although ashamed thus late to go,
I am resolved to try,
For if I stay away I know
In infancy I'll die.I know his patient nature well,
Delinquents he'll forgive;
He'll kindly pardon debtor's sins,
And bid each suppliant live.

Miscellany.

THE TWO FACES.

ONE FOR HOME, THE OTHER FOR COMPANY.

A CAPITAL STORY.

Of course we never mean to be personal, but yet we know that the following life lesson must find application somewhere, or it would never have been written. Or, like the preparations of the universal physician, it may be laid up for use in case of disease, or even taken as preventive.

Mrs. Abby Leeman was thirty years old, and had been married just ten years. She had an excellent husband, and three good children. She was naturally a kind, excellent woman, and meant to do right; she had one fault, and small as it seemed to her, it occasioned much unhappiness in the family circle. She was not always happy at home, nor was she always pleasant, though for the life of her she could not tell what had occurred to ruffle her feelings. She had everything about her calculated to beget joy, and her every reasonable wish was answered. But after all, she often went on in strains far from sweet or accordant.

"What is the matter, Abby?" asked her husband, as he returned one evening from the store and found his wife with a sour face on.

"Nothing," was the answer, given rather moodily.

"But something must be the matter. You never look so when you are happy. How can I help my looks? Can't I look as I feel without disturbing you?" "Pshaw, Abby—don't talk so," the husband said, at the same time placing his arms about her neck and kissing her. Now tell me what has happened."

"Nothing has happened more than usual," retorted the wife, still unpleasantly. "Who would be so sober, I'd like to know, stuck up here from morning until night with two squalling young ones to look out for all the time."

"Squalling young ones," repeated Albert Leeman, while an expression of pain passed over his features. "There! look at that!" cried the wife, pointing to where her youngest child, a girl of four years, was just climbing up to the tea-table after the sugar-bowl.

"Get out of that you little brat. There—take that! Now let me catch you up there again. Stop that crying—stop it, I say. You touch that sugar again, and I'll give you such a licking as you won't want!"

The poor child tried in vain to hush its sobbing, and instinctively crept to its father's side. He placed his arm around the little one and raised it to his knee, and in a moment more its reddened face was calm, where the mother's blow had fallen, was pillowed upon the father's bosom.

"Oh, yes," said the wife, "how you'll pet the brat. I'd like to have you have charge of 'em all day; we'd see how much patience you'd have!"

"I would at least remember she was my child," said he somewhat reproachfully, "and also bear in mind the simple fact that the young disposition may gain all its impulse from the example it receives at the hands of the guardian."

"Oh, yes, that's it. Of course, I am always wrong." And then Abby Leeman put her apron to her eyes and began to cry.

Of course, the husband could say no more. He had often, very often, suffered all this before, and he had tried to make his wife see how much real unhappiness she was making for herself, but she would not listen; or, if she did, the impression was not lasting. In fact she had no patience with her children, and the single ruffle of a moment was sure to make unhappiness for her. She loved her husband fondly, and her children she loved, too. She was proud of them, and for their comfort she would sacrifice any amount of personal convenience. Many and many an hour of blissful joy did she pass with her husband when the sky was clear, but a cloud was sure to bring the storm. For years not a day passed that had not seen some unpleasant passages between herself and children, and she would not understand that her very mode of treatment—the disposition she manifested—and the language she used—was surely warping the minds of the little ones.—In pain and anguish her husband had tried to show her this, but she would not listen; and then, when she was calm and reasonable, Albert could not find it in his heart to destroy the peace by such allusions.

On the present occasion, supper was eaten almost in silence. The husband was pained and the wife angry. The child once cried for a lump of sugar, and the mother jerked a piece up on her plate with the words—

"There, take it! You want everything you set your eyes on!" The little one ate the sugar in silence, while the mother felt more dismal still from this new outburst. And thus matters went on for an hour, and at the end of that time the door-bell rang, and some company was introduced. It was a neighbor and his wife. In a moment, the whole expression of Abby's face was changed. Smiles took the place of frowns, and her words were as sweet as could be; and during the whole evening she was happy and gay as though a cloud had never rested upon her brow.

"Abby," said her husband, after the visitors had gone, "since we have been married have I not done all in my power to make you happy? Have you ever expressed an earnest, heart-felt wish that I have not gratified?" "I don't know," replied wife, rather reluctantly.

"Yes, you do know," replied Albert; "and what I wish to know is this: Why could you not strive as much to make me happy, as you will to make those who are not dependent upon you for happiness. When I came home this evening worn and fatigued with the labors of the day, why could you not have met me with a smile and cheerful welcome?"

"Because I didn't feel like smiling," was the answer.

"But you smiled the moment Mr. Bixbee and his wife came in; and that, too, when your feelings were anything but pleasant a moment before. Can you do for their comfort what you are unwilling to do for mine?"

"I do the best I can, I am sure," sobbed Mrs. Leeman, beginning to cry. "I wish you'd found a wife who could have suited you better than I do. I never can suit you—never!"

Abby was in tears, and her husband could say no more. He could only wish that she would understand him! Oh! how often, when she was kind and good, did he wish she would always be so; and again when she was making company so unhappy, how fervently did he pray that she would always do the same for him. She was a neat, tidy, industrious woman, and only her own family knew of this dark trait in her character.

In the same town with Abby lived her only sister, who married a young man named Charles Frye. Charles was some eight and twenty, and Lydia, his wife, Abby's sister, three years younger. This young man was a carpenter by trade; strong, healthy, generous, and of superior intellect and intelligence. His business was good, and though he wore a paper cap and apron ten or twelve hours a day, yet he was laying up money. Lydia Frye was unlike her sister in one respect. That sweet smile which visitors found upon her face never faded in her husband's presence, and the words which the stranger heard her speak to her child were never more harsh than when alone with her little one. She loved her husband, and she loved her child, and never did she knowingly speak a word which could bring a cloud upon a member of her household.

And between these two sisters there was an estrangement. Several times Lydia had expostulated with Abby on account of her fractious treatment of her children, and once she had even gone so far as to put her arms about her sister's child and protect it from the mother's rage; and it unfortunately happened that on that very evening Mr. Leeman asked his wife why she could not be as kind and mild always as her sister was. Then, added to this, Abby shortly afterwards learned, through a meddling neighbor, that her sister had given her husband, Albert, some advice as to how he might best punish his fractious wife. This capped the climax in Abby's mind, and from that time there was no intercourse between the sisters.

One day Albert came home with the pleasing intelligence for his wife, that her father would be there the next morning, and that he intended to settle down with him and find a home. Abby was in ecstasies. She loved her father, for he was a good man, and had ever been kind to his children. And he was wealthy, too.

On the following day, Moses Gorham came. He was an old man now, just sixty, with white hair, and mild, benevolent look; and Abby was very happy. Her father told her he had finished his travels, and meant to settle down with one of his children for the remainder of his days.

"Oh, of course you'll come and stay with us," Abby said. "We've got the most room, and are the best able to keep you."

"Ah, my child," returned the old man with a smile, "I am better able to keep myself. But I can tell you better about that after I have been here a spell."

At the end of a week, Mr. Gorham informed Abby and her husband that he had that day deposited in the bank twenty thousand dollars, in their name, and that they might draw it as they pleased. He thus wished them to enjoy a part, at least of their patrimony, while he lived. Of course the reader can imagine how this announcement was received. But the old man did not stop long to hear their thanks, for he had the same errand to deliver to Lydia and her husband.

He found Charles Frye and wife occupying one chair when he entered. Lydia sitting in Charles' lap, and the child in her's. He told them what he had done, and it was some time ere one of them could speak. But Charles was the first to break the silence.

"Mr. Gorham," he said in a low, tremulous voice, "I accept your generous offer, and the more readily too, because I know it comes from the hand of love. But, sir, I could not have asked it—I could not have expected it on the ground that I am your son-in-law. No, no, for in this noble woman you have given me a treasure such as few men possess. Oh! you cannot know what a heaven on earth my home is while—while—my wife—"

But Charles had undertaken a work he could not perform. The words stuck in his throat, and the speech ended in a flood of tears. His gentle wife sank upon his bosom, and the old man went to the window and pretended to be looking at something in the street, notwithstanding it was very dark out there, and that he had his handkerchief before his eyes all the while.

Another week passed away, and during the most of the time the old man remained with Abby. After this he began to see the cloudy disposition manifest itself. He was pained and shocked. He spoke with her but she pretended she could not help it. Another week passed on, and during that time Mr. Gorham spoke with his child touching her fault, but still she did not mend.

Saturday evening came, and Abby Leeman was in her chamber. Her oldest child, a girl, came up and told her that grandpa was going away—that he had got his trunk at the door. Abby could not believe it. She started for the sitting room at once. In the hall she stopped, for the door was ajar, and she heard her father's voice. It was in a pained tone, and it struck to her soul at once.

"No, no, Albert," she heard the old man say, "I cannot remain here; I intended to make my home with Abby, for she is my oldest living; but I cannot bear it. Nearly every day my heart is made to ache by the harsh, unkind words I hear spoken to your little ones. Oh! such good, kind, sweet children! And I love them so! But Abby will not listen, even to me. Once I might have borne it; but now, when my heart is lonely and sad from recent bereavement, I cannot bear it. I will come to see you, and you shall have the old share of love. And I fear she is not always kind to you."

"Has Lydia told you so?" asked Albert.

"Lydia!" uttered Mr. Gorham in surprise. "She told me? Ah, you don't know her if you think so. No, no, she has only told me what a good and faithful wife Abby was. But I can see, as my presence grows more common, the restraint wears off, and Abby begins to show me the face she often keeps for me. I speak this to you, Albert, because I would not lie to you. But—but I will see you again. I will see Abby again!"

Abby listened to him no longer. With a wildly, beating, bursting heart, she hastened to her room, and threw herself upon her bed, and there she lay for a long time. When her husband came up she was sick, and when he asked her what he could do for her, she said she would be left to herself. In a moment, he mistrusted that she had heard some part of her father's remarks and left her.

One day, little Nellie looked pale and sick, and cried a great deal with pain. It was the youngest—the "baby." Abby was fractious, but she did not speak as her sister usually. She had tried to reform since her father left, a week before, but she allowed a spirit of anger to come into her soul on account of the course he had pursued, so her trial did not amount to much. When Albert came home, the child was worse, and by this time it had become so sick that the mother was sorry she had been so harsh through the day.

Mr. Leeman went for the doctor, and when that man came, he said little Nellie had the scarlet fever. All night the little one suffered much, and its cheeks and brow seemed on fire. On the next day she grew weaker and sicker, then Abby feared she might die. Oh, what a thought!

Sabbath night came, and little Nellie had grown very white and thin, during the whole day she had been calm and quiet. Could she be dying? "Oh, God, spare my child! spare my child!" the frantic mother prayed upon her knees. The clock had just struck nine, when Nellie raised her eyes, and they looked very strange.

"Mamma—good mamma," she whispered, "kiss little Nellie!" The mother pressed her lips upon her child's brow and kissed her fervently. "Mamma—you love little Nellie; and you love George and Mary."

The mother could not speak. Just then Albert entered the room. "Papa—kiss little Nellie! Love little Nellie always. Love George and Mary, and love mamma!" When Abby Leeman looked upon her child the spirit had fled. The little sufferer was free from all earthly pain. One moment the mother gazed upon the broken casket, and then she sank down upon her knees and wept as though her heart would break. Her husband knelt by her side; he placed both his arms about her neck, and with one deep burst of passionate grief, she pillowed her head upon his bosom.

On the next morning, Lydia came and took care of the body of little Nellie. She dressed it sweetly, combed its golden hair back, and when she placed it in the coffin, she spread new and fragrant flowers all around it. She had done all this when Abby entered.

The sisters were alone by the dead child. The bereaved mother gazed awhile upon the lovely face of the little sleeper, and then she turned to her sister. Lydia opened her arms, and the next moment the estranged ones were locked in each other's embrace. It was a long, long while ere either could speak. They could only weep and cling more closely heart to heart.

We will not tell the thoughts that dwelt in Abby Leeman's mind upon this occasion; nor will we tell of the long hours she spent upon her knees in prayer while all others of the household slept.

"Love George and Mary! Love little Nellie always! Love Mamma!" Oh, how those words rang in that mother's soul. And how other words came back upon her, too—harsh, unkind words which had been spoken to the cherub that had gone. But she found a balm in the solemn resolution she took to herself never to be unkind again.

And the resolution was sacredly kept. Albert and Abby mourned for the departed one, but they felt, too, that the gentle spirit of the heaven-born child was dwelling with them, making a paradise of their home, and leading them on in joy and peace.

Ere long the old man came to live awhile with his eldest child, and from that time he divided his months equally between them, and he could no more feel that one home was pleasanter than the other. Both were alike, joyous, peaceful, and happy. When he now looked upon Abby's happy, smiling face, he knew that she had no other face for domestic use. The beaming, genial countenance that welcomed the visitor to her dwelling, was never laid aside. Its sunshine was for her husband and children, and the cloudy brow was put away forever.

GOODNESS GRACIOUS!—Some one who has been "about in spots," gives the following result of his observation:

The young ladies of Boston, before going to a party, rub their eyes with extract of onion, to make them sparkle and give a brilliant expression.

The New York belles don India rubber stockings to contract the feet and make them look small.

The Providence beauties put a small clam shell under the hollow of each foot to lift the instep and confer a well-made air to the pedals.

The Philadelphia demoiselles eat persimmons to draw their mouths to a point, and give their lips a "do kiss me" look.

The Cincinnati ladies "do up their curls" with hogs' tails, and when asked to marry answer, "Oh, oui, oui."

FELPANY IN A TENANT.—Landlord.—Good morning, Mr. Jones. Fine day, sir. I've taken the liberty of bringing in a receipt for the quarter's rent.

Tenant.—Rent, O. ah! Due last week—you're quick on the quarter day, Mr. Brown. By the way, did you know that none of the doors in this house will shut?

Landlord.—New house, you know, sir. Must have time to settle.

Tenant.—And so must I, Mr. Brown. Good morning. [Exit landlord, unpaid, but uncontented.]

The term "well" has generally been applied to over-dressed gentlemen, but if the ladies dresses go on expanding at their present rate to ballooning, we shall soon see the little boys running after a lady who may be as round as an omnibus, and hear them crying out lustily—"There goes a swell!"

A gentleman thought he'd like something painted in the hall of a new house, and he chose the Italics passing over the Red Sea. He engaged a man for the job, who went to work and painted the hall red. "Nice color," said he, "but where are the Israelites?" "Oh, they have passed over!"

"Have you Goldsmith's Greece?" asked a gentleman, on entering a bookstore the other day.

"No, but they have some excellent bear's oil two doors below," answered the indefatigable book merchant.

DANVILLE:
Friday, Feb. 13, 1857.

Our Circuit Court is still in session, but will probably adjourn finally, sometime to-day.

We understand that Hon. J. S. CHESMAN has expressed an intention to announce himself a candidate for Congress in this district, an early day.

To-morrow is St. Valentine's day, and we presume, will be appropriately observed by our young folks generally.

A young man by the name of PADGETT, from Lincoln county, was indicted at the present term of our Circuit Court, for uttering and publishing a forgery, being a note purporting to have been executed by James Crow, Esq., in favor of John Wilson. The bail of the accused was fixed at $250, which he succeeded in giving on Wednesday, and was discharged from custody.

JEWELRY OF HOME MANUFACTURE.
—We have had the pleasure of examining some splendid specimens of miniature breast-pins of various sizes, recently manufactured expressly for WHEELER, the Ambrotypist, by Mr. SHARRARD, at J. B. Akin's Jewelry Establishment in this place. These pins are made of fine gold, and are exceedingly beautiful in appearance, reflecting high credit upon the ingenuity and skill of the manufacturer. They can be seen, of various sizes, at Wheeler's Gallery.

Wheeler, by the way, has just received a patent circular diamond, for cutting his glass plates, and is now prepared to put the regular Ambrotype into breast-pins, &c. He is also making the patent Melanotype—a very handsome style of picture.

IN A SNARE.—The Democracy of the fifth Congressional district seem to be in quite a tangle, in reference to who shall be their candidate for Congress at the ensuing election. The Lebanon Post is in favor of Dr. Palmer, of Washington; the Bardonia Gazette for Jewett, the present representative; while our oleaginous neighbor of the Harrodsburg Transcript is in favor of "most anybody"—makes no difference who—and thinks there are at least fifty men in the district who would make just as good Congressmen as either Jewett or Palmer.

CONGRESSIONAL.—The business of both Houses during the past week has been generally devoid of interest.

On the 4th, the Senate passed the House bill confirming entries of land under the graduation act and extending the time for selling the lands granted to the Kentucky Asylum for the Deaf and Dumb. The debate on the resolution to print the correspondence between Gen. Scott and the Secretary of War was resumed.

In the House, the submarine telegraph bill was considered for a while. The House then went into committee of the whole on the tariff bill which was discussed for the remainder of the day.

On the 6th no business of general importance transacted—both Houses being engaged considering private bills.

On Monday last, quite a debate was had in the Senate upon the credentials of Mr. Fitch, who presented himself as Senator elect from Indiana. He was finally sworn in and took his seat—the legality of his election to be hereafter considered.

The "corruption investigation committee" has not yet made their report.

Thos. Clarke, of Mason county, emancipated by his will thirty negroes. A portion of them appeared in court and signified their preference for remaining as slaves in Kentucky.

The Ohio and Mississippi Railroad will be finished about the first of March next. Trains will then run directly through from St. Louis to Cincinnati.

The coal taken from the Pennsylvania coal mines during the last year sold for forty millions of dollars, a sum almost equal to the yield of the gold mines of California.

Mr. Buchanan left Washington for Wheatland, on the 3d inst. It is generally understood that his visit was for the purpose of consulting personally some of his friends at Washington, who would not go to Wheatland.

ARREST OF A LETTER THIEF.—A negro was arrested in Lexington on Saturday, charged with stealing letters from the Post-office in that city. He had been employed about the office.

The proposed extension of the slack-water navigation of Kentucky river, up to the Three Forks of that stream, is attracting some attention, and seems to meet with general favor. It has become of late years clearly evident that the Ohio river, "froze up one-half the year and dry the other," is not to be depended on any longer, to furnish facilities for transportation; and especially to furnish the requisite quantity of fuel to those who have hitherto looked to it for their supply of that article. To lock and dam the Kentucky, as far as the point proposed, and thus render it navigable at all seasons of the year, would at once throw into the lap of Central and Northern Kentucky, a teeming treasure of iron, salt, coal, and timber of the most valuable kinds. The mountainous region about the "Three Forks," now inaccessible for commercial purposes, could furnish an almost inexhaustible supply of those indispensable articles. It is in fact, an immense field of wealth, only waiting for the outlay of human energy and enterprise, to give the public the incalculable benefits of its untold resources.

A railroad to the Forks, would better meet the requirements of the times, but the almost insuperable difficulties and immense expense of constructing a road through such a country renders it impracticable for the present, at least, to attempt its construction. The extension of the slack-water navigation seems, therefore, to be agreed upon as the best, quickest, and surest means, under the circumstances, of reaching the desired end.

It is proposed that the next Legislature be requested to charter a company to make the desired improvements, giving such counties as may desire to do so, permission to subscribe stock, by the vote of their citizens, and subscribing on the part of the State the annual net profits of the locks and dams already in use, to the capital stock of the company. We have some doubt whether the necessary amount of means could be raised under such a charter as the one proposed. The truth is, the State, through the Legislature, ought to liberally aid such an enterprise, which would certainly be greatly conducive to the wealth and prosperity of the Commonwealth, and would, in the course of time, vastly add to the public revenue. It is time for Kentucky to stop depending upon other States for her supply of those articles of which she possesses within her own borders, an almost unlimited abundance. The money given to Pennsylvania for iron and coal, and to Virginia for salt, building up the business and resources of those States, had better be kept at home, and be made conducive to the prosperity of our own State. The report of Dr. Owen, the State Geologist, shows the immense mineral wealth of the State; but still Kentucky, by the failure to develop her resources, is rapidly falling behind some of her much younger, but more energetic sister States. We are glad to see that public opinion is at last being stirred up a little on this subject, and if the people and their representatives will but do their duty in the premises, and inform themselves as to the merits and utility of the proposed improvements, something may be done which will not only be a great addition to the public convenience, but will also greatly enhance the wealth and resources of the Commonwealth.

"NO! I HAVE NOT BROWN TO FIGHT!"
—Such was the language of Paul Jones, says the Baltimore Clipper, when the British Commander asked if he had surrendered. Although his deck was slippery with blood, his ship on fire, his guns dismounted, and his colors shot away, Paul Jones with an immortal heroism kept up the battle. "Do you surrender?" shouted the English captain, when he saw that the colors of the "Bon Homme Richard" were gone from the masthead. There was a lull in the conflict for an instant.

"And the boldest held his breath."
As Paul Jones, covered with blood and powder stains, waved his sword and gave his memorable answer: "No, I have not begun to fight!" And the result was that the battle changed, and in a few minutes the British ship struck her colors and surrendered, and Paul Jones leaping from his own sinking vessel stood victorious upon the royal deck!

This is the position of the American party. When our enemies, in view of the recent defeat of our candidate for President, ask us if we surrender, our response is that "we have not yet begun to fight!" The American party never surrenders, but will fight on, fight ever, in the good cause, until victory perches upon our banners.

The new Governor of New Jersey recently walked twelve miles through a tremendous snow storm, that he might be inaugurated. The roads were buried in snow, so that he could not travel by rail.

It is said that there are about seventeen thousand criminal depredators at large in the city of London, who are known to the police.

"THE POPE IS ABOVE ALL LAWS."
—EVIDENCE FROM "HEADQUARTERS." It is stated in the recent foreign news, by the steamer Atlantic, that "a secret conclave was held at Rome, December 15, 1856, at which the state of the Romish Church in Mexico and South America was considered." It is further stated, that "the Pope complained very bitterly of the doings of the new government of Mexico, and declares all the measures which it has taken against the Apostolic chair, to be null and void." He also DENOUNCES THOSE PRIESTS WHO OBEY THE LAWS OF THE COUNTRIES IN WHICH THEY LIVE, RATHER THAN THE INSTRUCTIONS FORWARDED THEM FROM ROME.

Here, very truthfully remarks a contemporary, we have the essence of Romanism. It is that the Church, of which the Pope is the head, is superior to all other authority on earth, and extends to the future state of existence; that every true Catholic owes and must acknowledge supreme allegiance to Rome—that when the Pope commands, he must resist the laws of the country of which he is a citizen, and at all times, under all circumstances, obey instructions FORWARDED FROM ROME!

This doctrine has always been maintained and urged by Brownson, and other leading writers of the Roman Catholic Church in this country, but political demagogues, seeking to retain or get power, have bitterly denied it. Not one of our readers, we suppose, but has heard these denials, made in the face of history, and contrary to the official bulls and books of the Romish Church. Now, however, we have the reiteration of the principle from the Pope himself. "Secret conclaves" of the Vatican are held at Rome, the map of North and South America spread out before them, and spies, in the form of bishops, priests, &c., sent into every part of this country, Mexico, and South America, to plot for the advancement of Romanism, and are commanded not to obey the laws of the land in which they are acting, but in all things to "await instructions from Rome."

It is to prevent the accomplishment of the designs of the Roman Catholic Church upon this country, that the American party opposes the attempts of that Church to gain political power and supremacy—which, if once obtained, would put an end to religious liberty, and in place of freedom give us priestly arrogance and ecclesiastical tyranny. And yet, with the facts staring them broad in the face, there are those in this and every other community, who accuse the American party of waging war on the Roman Catholic religion; when, in truth, the Romish Church is a great and well constructed political machine, seeking industriously by all sorts of means to subvert the ends especially of republican government, and destroy every vestige of religious freedom.

ONE OF POSTMASTER GENERAL CAMPBELL'S DEPUTIES.—The Louisville Journal learns from excellent authority, that in the First Congressional District of this State, there is an ardent Democratic postmaster, who believes it to be his duty, and claims and actually exercises his right, to open registered letters passing through his post-office. This individual is in high favor with some of the Sag Night leaders, and notwithstanding his prying habits, is retained in office for party convenience, although his character is so notorious that twice upon his application for admission into an American Council, the black balls were exhausted and the ballot-box nearly filled with pieces of coal used as a substitute for them.

KANSAS AND THE DEMOCRACY.—The Observer and Reporter, truthfully remarks—ever since the election of BRUNAN, the leaders of the Democracy have been preparing the minds of the Southern people for the admission of Kansas as a free State. The speeches of Northern Democrats, in which the doctrine of Squatter Sovereignty is openly proclaimed, are applauded and published by editors of the South; Democratic papers which demand that the new administration shall favor the South are denounced—even in the South—as ultra in their views, and every indication teaches us that the pipe-layers and platform builders of the Democracy are feverishly anxious that Kansas shall adopt a constitution prohibiting slavery. It is openly asserted that they are more desirous that Kansas shall come into the Union as a free State than the Black Republicans themselves, and we believe it.

Mr. Buchanan, it is stated, has invited Mr. Pierce to remain at the Presidential mansion until after the inauguration, and then become his guest till he desires to leave for New Hampshire.

Jno. B. Stanley, of Florida, is a modern Nimrod, and the greatest hunter of the age. Besides his almost daily presence on his plantation during the last twenty-five years, he has killed at least ten thousand deer, one hundred wolves, fifty panthers and twelve bears.

THE BURDELL MURDER.—The mysterious murder of Dr. Burdell, of New York, is still the great topic of our New York papers. The case is still being investigated, and new facts are being occasionally brought to light in reference to the matter. The neighborhood of the house in Bond street, where the murder was committed, is constantly surrounded by a curious crowd, and the horrible affair is all the talk throughout the city. The facts are, in brief, these: Dr. Burdell, a dentist, possessed of considerable property, was boarding with a Mrs. Cunningham. About 8 o'clock, on Saturday morning, 31st ult., he was found in his room, covered with blood, and having no less than fifteen stabs on his neck and breast evidently made with some sharp pointed instrument. He had been married, but was divorced from his wife, and his landlady, Mrs. Cunningham, immediately set up a claim for his property, on the ground that she herself was his second wife, producing a certificate of marriage to prove her statement.

It has been proven, however, before the examining courts that Mrs. Cunningham and Dr. B. were on bad terms, and that Mr. Eckel and Mr. Snodgrass, who also boarded in the house, entertained ill feelings towards the Doctor, and were on the most intimate and perhaps criminal terms with Mrs. C., whose room communicated with theirs. It was also in proof that Mr. Eckel, not long since, at the breakfast table, remarked that "it would be a good thing to give the Doctor a knock, if it could only be done handsy," and at the same time he looked wickedly at Mrs. Cunningham, who jestingly rebuked him for his language.

Some of the Doctor's private papers were found in the possession of Eckel, and the prosecution will attempt to prove that a dirk found in Dr. B.'s room, smeared with blood, is the property of that gentleman. One of the witnesses before the Coroner testified that on the night of the murder he was passing Burdell's house at half-past 10 o'clock, and saw a man pass in. Immediately after he heard a cry of murder and a fall. He stopped to listen, when a man in his shirt sleeves opened Burdell's front door and ordered him away. The witness was subsequently carried into another room where he pointed out Eckel as the man. The latter appeared dumbfounded but uttered no word.

One of the popular theories is that Mrs. Cunningham and her lover wished to secure Burdell's property; that a marriage ceremony was performed between her and a person who personated Burdell; that the murder was then committed, and then comes the widow's claim on the property.

Mrs. Cunningham is the widow of a Brooklyn distiller, whose sudden death, some ten years ago, soon after his life was insured in her favor for $10,000, excited some comment.

Eckel has been remanded to prison; and Mrs. Cunningham to the custody of the Coroner.

DESTRUCTIVE FIRE IN LOUISVILLE.
—A LEAP FOR LIFE.—On Monday morning last, the splendid block of four-story business houses, in Louisville between 1st and 2d streets, above the Galt House, were destroyed by fire, together with two three-story buildings adjoining. The houses burned were occupied by Gallagher & Co., R. Atkinson & Co., Brannin, Summers & Co., Bartley, Johnson & Co., and the two three-story buildings in part by the proprietor of the Galt House. The buildings were owned by Gallagher, Mitchell & Guthrie; John L. Martin, of Miss. S. L. Nock; and Mrs. R. Tyler. Most of the merchandise and produce in the houses were destroyed. The total loss is estimated at over $200,000, the greater portion of which was covered by insurance. Upon the two four-story houses of J. L. Martin, however, there was not a cent of insurance. The fire, which originated in the rear of Gallagher & Co.'s store, is supposed to have been the work of an incendiary, as that firm has been burned out several times before.

Shortly after the fire broke out, it was discovered that Mr. Pearson, an old and well known citizen, who had a sleeping room in the third story, was still in his room unable to get out. The lower stories were in flames, and the third was enveloped in smoke, and he had no other means of escape than through the window. A mattress was placed on the pavement to break his fall. He lowered himself from the window as best he could and in his descent caught upon a projection which somewhat broke his fall. He was picked up much bruised, but happily no bones broken, and at last accounts he was thought to be recovering.

The Glasgow Ky. Journal, of last week, mentions the death of a negro woman, in that neighborhood, at the great age of 121 years.

Four or five wild-cat banks, utterly without basis, have been started in Kansas by speculators in the neighboring States.

Gen. Walker, it is said, has recently been supplied with a war engine, capable of discharging 300 ounce balls every minute. In form it resembles a small grindstone—is turned by a crank, and is worked by two men. The inventor is now in England, experimenting before the Admiralty.

Dates from Vera Cruz to the 3d inst., and the City of Mexico to the 29th ult., represent the country as distracted. The Potosi insurgents are dispersed. Fears are entertained of a filibuster invasion of Lower California from San Francisco.

The rivers are still pretty full of floating ice, but navigation is about fully resumed, with a good stage of water. The boats for all points, we suppose, will have no difficulty now in their regular trips.

FINE KENTUCKY STOCK.—We had the pleasure yesterday of seeing one of the finest lot of stock that has been collected in this State. They were the property of Messrs. Lee, Heath & Tucker, who intend shipping them on the steamer J. S. Montgomery, that leaves to-morrow, and are to be taken to different Southern markets for disposal. We have no doubt but that there will be an eager demand for these fine animals when they shall have reached their destination.

This lot consists of one hundred and forty mules, which are really A No. 1. They were purchased in Bourbon county, and selected with great care, so they must be of the best description.

Messrs. Lee, Heath & Tucker have also with them two extra horses—beautifully shaped, spirited, graceful, active and rapid animals. One of them is for the saddle, and will afford some sweet Southern belle opportunity to practice the art of equestrianism. The other is the famous sorrel horse Dan Rice, which took the premium in the buggy rings at the Danville, Springfield and Bardonia fairs. He was also successful in competing for the premium in the rings for fast horses at Springfield and Bardonia.

This shipment will be hailed with satisfaction by Southern planters, and very considerably enhance the reputation of Kentucky as the great stock growing State of the era.—Low Jour.

Marriages.

MARRIED.—In Jessamine county, on Tuesday morning last, 10th inst., by Rev. Mr. Harer, Mr. John M. Evans, of Harrodsburg, (formerly of this place), to Miss Maria J. Quar, daughter of Mr. Guesen, Quar, of Jessamine.

We take pleasure in congratulating our young friends, and in tendering them our best wishes for their future happiness. May kind Providence fill their lives with all the blessings of conjugal life, and may it be theirs to realize that

"Married love has sweeter names,
And finer ties, and sweeter claims,
Than ever wedded hearts can feel,
Or wedded hearts can ever reveal."

MARRIED.—At the County Clerk's Office, in this place, on Tuesday morning, 12th inst., by Rev. Dr. Hicks, Mr. Henry Dean to Miss Mary Whitwell.

Woods Hair Restorative.—Among all preparations for the hair, that have been introduced as infallible, none has ever given the satisfaction or gained the popularity that Prof. Woods' Hair Restorative now has. His restorative has passed the ordeal of innumerable fashionable toilets, and the ladies, wherever they have tested it, pronounce it a peerless article.

They find, where the hair is thinned, that it creates a fresh growth—that it fully restores the vegetative power of the roots on the denuded places, and causes the fibres to shoot forth anew—that it dissolves and removes dandruff, prevents grayness, restores the hair to its original color when grayness has actually supervened, gives a rich lustre, imparts the softness and flexibility of silk to the hair, and keeps it always luxuriant, healthy, and in full vigor.

FAIR WARNING.

NOTICE is hereby given, that I will attend at the Law Office of BOYER & ANDERSON, until the 10th day of March next, (except when absent on business), for the purpose of settling with all who are Dints for Gardeners.

MAKING A HOT BED.—About the last week in February, or as soon as the severest weather is gone, manure should be prepared for hot beds, where hot bed frames and sashes can be had—had no garden should be without them. The manure, if fresh from the stable, should be well shaken out, mixed, thrown into a heap and left for ten days or a fortnight, under a shed or other sheltered place, where cold wind and driving snow or rain can be kept off, when it can be brought out to some sheltered situation, and shaken and squared up into a bed three feet high and one foot larger every way than the frame that is to stand upon it. The manure should be well beaten down with the back of the fork while the bed is being made, and, if very dry, watered. When done, place the frame upon the bed, and cover the sashes, close, and cover with old mat or old litter for a few days. Examine the bed the second or third day, and if very hot, let a little air at the back of the frame for one day and night, by raising the sash half an inch; if not very hot, the earth should be put upon the bed at once.

The earth should be prepared in the fall, and kept under cover all winter, if possible; well raked, turned, and without third well decomposed stable manure is the best. If this is not to be had, take some of the best garden soil that can be procured; well enriched with good rotten manure, and a portion of leaf-mould, if to be had. When this is prepared, put it on the bed to the depth of about six inches, raked smooth, and put a down moderately with the back of the fork.

WHAT TO SOW IN A HOT BED.—Use short-light frames, of about six feet width and twelve feet long, one light each, and use the best of early vegetables. Two feet square each, of the following, will be sufficient for moderate size family. For the first sowing, Early Paragon cauliflower; Early York or Early Warrington cabbage; the latter is the best early cabbage we have ever sown. Purple egg plant, tomatoes, white solid celery, and a few peppers, if wanted. One whole light can be sown with Early Charlotte lettuce, and one with Scarlet Short-Top or early Oval radish. The radish seed should be covered about half an inch, the others about a quarter of an inch. When sown, pat the soil down gently with the back of the spade, and give a very gentle watering. The lights should then be laid on and covered with manure until the seeds begin to vegetate, when they must be uncovered in the day time and covered at night. Should they be much steam rising, a little air must be given all night. Shortly afterwards, it will be time to sow a few cucumber seeds under the centre of each sash; if three grow in each, it will be enough. When the cucumbers have made their third rough leaf, the top should be pinched out to make them branch, and the other things in the frame immediately around them should be pulled up and used first.

The temperature should be from 60 to 65 degs. by night and from 75 to 80 degs. by day. Give air in all mild days, and cover up at night. Should the heat decline too much, a lining of fresh manure, eighteen inches thick, should be applied all around the frame, within six inches of the top, and then covered with boards. Water when the earth looks dry, with water a few degrees warmer than the atmosphere of the bed—say about 80 degs. Any rank steam, from the manure in the frame, must be carefully guarded against; for if it come in contact with any of the young plants, they will be destroyed in one night. But it is easily smelt, and can be guarded against by leaving a little air off at night, and hanging a thin mat over the opening to prevent cold wind.

TRANSPLANTING FROM THE HOT BED TO THE OPEN GROUND.—As soon as the earliest of ground gets warmed a little, and all danger of spring frosts is over (about 1st of May in central Ohio), the tomatoes, eggplants, cauliflowers, &c., can be planted in their final places. Choose some warm, sheltered spots for the first crops, and plant in moist weather, or water a little when planted. The celery will be better if picked out about four inches apart each way, in some light rich earth, in a warm border, and left there for a month, before planting in the trenches. The lettuce and radishes can be planted and used as they are fully grown. When these are cleared off, transplant the rest of the crops, and the plants that are to be used for the benefit of the pumpkins, and their branches spread out and pegged down where they are wanted to grow, and they will soon strike roots, and the vines will thereby be much benefited.

SINGERS' SEWING MACHINES!

GREAT success is always the most conclusive proof of merit. Judged by this test there is no labor saving Machine before the public comparable to SINGER'S SEWING MACHINES. After establishing the highest reputation in the United States, they were exhibited at the Centennial Fair in Philadelphia, where they carried off the highest premium, and a great many testimonials to make them the best built in the world.

In Every Branch of Industry in which sewing is to be done, these Machines can be used with immense profit. As the speed of the Sewing Machine is in proportion to the skill of the operator, it is not surprising that the only kind of Sewing Machine ever made, which perfectly executed work, could be so easily and so cheaply made. Thousands of inferior and worthless Sewing Machines have been sold under various names, but SINGER'S MACHINES alone have been found everywhere to satisfy the wants of the public.

(The printed instructions for using are sent with each machine, from which any one can readily acquire the art of managing them.) The machines are packed securely to go to any part of the world. To all persons desiring more particular information, we will, on application by letter, at either of our offices, forward a copy of I. M. Singer & Co.'s Circular, a paper which is devoted to the Sewing Machine interest.
